

Elizabeth HAXBY

Elizabeth Haxby MBBS, MA, MSc, FRCA is the Lead Clinician For Clinical Risk at the Royal Brompton Hospital, London . UK. She was a consultant adult and paediatric cardiothoracic anaesthetist for four years until 2002 but now devotes her time solely to clinical risk management, patient safety and medico-legal work. She is a Fellow of the Improvement faculty of the NHSIII and on the faculty of the Leadership in Patient Safety programme. She was also a member of the Core team for Patient Safety First with a focus on leadership and junior doctors. She lectures widely and has a particular interest in patient safety, human factors, consent, clinical risk assessment and evidence-based risk management as well as training in Quality Improvement. Her Masters in Risk Management Dissertation focused on how staff record adverse events in clinical records. Her publications include papers on safety in clinical practice, particularly fiberoptic bronchoscopy for which she was an advisor to the European Respiratory Society Working Group, clinical risk management and patient safety. In 2010 she was a joint editor of 'An Introduction to clinical governance and patient safety'. She is an honorary senior lecture at the National Heart and Lung Institute, has recently completed a Master's in Medical Ethics and Law and is a member of the Royal College of Physicians 'Future Hospital Commission' working party.