

Professor David Wong graduated from the University of Liverpool in 1978. He is the Head of the Department of Ophthalmology, Albert Bing Ching Young Professor in Ophthalmology and Chair Professor in Ophthalmology, the University of Hong Kong; Chief of Service (Ophthalmology) of the Queen Mary Hospital, Hospital Authority; Honorary Professor of the Department of Optometry, Hong Kong Polytechnic University and Department of Medicine, the University of Liverpool; Honorary Consultant Ophthalmologist, the Royal Liverpool Hospital.

He has been the Editor-in-chief for Graefe's Archive of Clinical and Experimental Ophthalmology since 2009, Section Editor of the British Journal of Ophthalmology since 2001 and the Editorial Board member of the Chinese Journal of Fundus and Ocular Disease since 2003. He has been the President of the British and Eire Vitreoretinal Society since 2010 and the Sector Editor of Eye from 2012. He was the Vice President to the Royal College of Ophthalmologists and Chairman of Scientific Committee from 2003 to 2007.

His research field is retina focusing on proliferative vitreoretinopathy and macular degeneration, their pathogenesis and conducting clinical trials of surgery with adjuvant therapy and developing new surgical techniques and tamponade agents.