

Service Priorities and Programmes
Electronic Presentations

Convention ID: 956

Submitting author: Miss Wai Ling TSANG

Post title: Registered Nurse, UCH, KEC

Transformation in Palliative Care Delivery in Surgery: We're Now at the Tipping Point

Tsang WL(1), Li HY(1), Wong SL(1), Kwok TY(1), Yuen SC(1), Kwok SS(1), Ko PS(2), Lau SY(1)

(1)End-of-Life Care Workgroup, Department of Surgery, United Christian Hospital

(2)Palliative Care Services, Kowloon East Cluster

Keywords:

palliative care in surgery
end-of-life care in surgery
hospice care in surgery
healthcare transformation

Introduction

Why is palliative care delivery in Surgery necessary? When one looks at studies of what patients with life-threatening illness want and compares to what they experience in surgical units, the gap is huge. Surgical nurses, being patient advocates, should engage with patients and families sooner rather than later in their illness trajectories to consider how to manage the illness, not just their capacity to survive.

Objectives

To fill the service gap of palliative care in Surgery by producing a quality-driven, evidence-based yet straightforward clinical practice guide based on a focus strategy.

Methodology

In line with Guide to Good Nursing Practice: End-of-Life Care recommended by Nursing Council of Hong Kong and the strategic goal of improving quality of palliative care proposed in HA Strategic Plan 2017-2022, multiple phases of work were undertaken from July 2015 to December 2017. A pragmatic clinical practice guide for surgical patients facing life-threatening conditions was developed based on assessments on knowledge of and attitudes towards end-of-life care of surgical nurses. Key domains, including preparation for bereavement, nursing care for imminently dying patients and at the dying scene were crystallized according to the results of the assessments and the palliative care checklist formulated by UCH Palliative Care Team. After a year of rollout, its content was refined through analyses of implementation in routine practice and consensus opinions from frontline nurses.

Result

This clinical practice guide inspires surgical nurses with the art of care to provide for patients' comfort, function and longevity. It provides practical directions and assists nurses to master the skills on advance care planning and learn how to be clear with patients, families and themselves about the realities of the disease pictures. Through the implementation, patients and families are included in the decision process and their wishes are honored. The delivery of explicit and high-quality palliative care maintains good nurse-to-patient relations and enhances satisfaction of hospital care of patients and families. Surgical nursing has always been up to the unique challenges of the era. This clinical practice guide has become an island of credibility for our nurses as they traverse the often stormy waters of life-limiting illness.