

Professor Sian Griffiths

Professor Sian Griffiths, OBE is President of the Faculty of Public Health Medicine. She is also a Consultant Public Health Physician at the Oxford Radcliffe Hospital, Senior Fellow/Senior Clinical Lecturer in Public Health at Oxford University, and Visiting Professor at Oxford Brookes University. She has had a long career in service public health, having been Director of Public Health at regional and district levels. She has always been actively engaged in national public health and is currently Chair of Pharmacy Healthlink, Board Member of the New Opportunities Fund, Board Member of the Health Protection Agency, a member of the National Cancer Taskforce and the Cross Taskforce Prevention Group, amongst other commitments. At a local level she is involved in several local charities. Her main interests have been in developing public health practice to address the wider determinants of health and in priority setting within the NHS

She is currently Director of the School of Public Health, the Chinese University of Hong Kong