

Prof David MA

Prof David MA, Professor of Medicine
St Vincent's Hospital Sydney, Australia

Professor David Ma is committed to clinically relevant research and education. He strongly believes in contributing to advances in science to help patients.

Dr Ma is Professor of Haematology, St Vincent's Hospital Clinical School of Medicine. Patient care focuses on blood diseases, cancer and bone marrow stem cell transplantation. Always involved in public health education and continuing education of himself and others, David holds honorary appointments at University of Sydney and University of Technology, Sydney. He is Vice President of the Asia-Pacific region of the International Society of Haematophoresis & Graft Engineering; and an Executive Member of the Australian Leukaemia and Lymphoma Study Group.

Patient support groups also play an important role, including CanRevive (a support group for Chinese speaking patients), the Arrow Foundation (a support group for transplant patients) and organisations such as Rotary.